CONSTITUTIONAL POLICY TRANSMISSION

Subject: Submission of an International Policy Document on Historical Justice and the Restoration of Panchami Lands for AdiDravidar Communities in India – Presented in Reference to Article 51(c) of the Constitution of India

Date: 18th March 2026

Place: Republic of India

To

His Excellency,

The Hon'ble President of the Republic of India,

Rashtrapati Bhavan,

New Delhi – 110004

India.

Your Excellency,

With the highest respect for the Constitution of India and the democratic institutions of the Republic, I humbly submit for consideration the enclosed policy document titled:

“INTERNATIONAL POLICY SUBMISSION ON HISTORICAL JUSTICE AND THE RESTORATION OF PANCHAMI LANDS FOR ADIDRAVIDAR COMMUNITIES IN INDIA.”

This document has been prepared as a constructive contribution to public reflection and policy dialogue concerning the historical land allocations known as Panchami Lands, which were originally introduced during the late nineteenth century in the Madras Presidency as part of administrative measures aimed at addressing the socio-economic marginalization of communities then classified as the “Depressed Classes.”

The submission respectfully recognizes that the Constitution of India provides a comprehensive framework for social justice, equality, and the protection of historically disadvantaged communities, including through Article 46, which directs the State to promote the educational and economic interests of Scheduled Castes and other weaker sections of society and to protect them from social injustice and exploitation. In addition, Article 51(c) of the Constitution of India encourages the fostering of respect for international law and treaty obligations in the relations of organized peoples with one another.

In this spirit, the enclosed document has been prepared as a policy reflection that situates the historical context of Panchami Lands within:

- Constitutional principles of justice and equality
- Socio-economic development considerations
- International human rights perspectives
- Civilizational ethical principles emphasizing dignity and peaceful progress

The document does not seek coercive direction, legal enforcement, or adversarial action. Rather, it is intended solely as a respectful policy submission that may contribute to informed discussion, research, and democratic engagement on questions of historical land justice and inclusive development.

In accordance with Article 51(c), it is respectfully requested that this submission may kindly be taken on record, and—if considered appropriate within constitutional procedures—be transmitted to relevant national or international institutions for academic, policy, or public reflection.

This submission is made in full respect of:

- The sovereignty and unity of India
- The Constitution of India
- The rule of law and democratic institutions
- Peaceful and constructive dialogue

The welfare, dignity, and advancement of historically marginalized communities remain an important measure of the ethical strength and democratic maturity of any society.

I therefore respectfully place this document before Your Excellency as a contribution to ongoing national and global reflection on justice, dignity, and inclusive development.

ENCLOSURES

The submission includes the following accompanying sections:

1. International Policy Submission on Historical Justice and the Restoration of Panchami Lands for AdiDravidar Communities in India

INTERNATIONAL POLICY SUBMISSION ON HISTORICAL JUSTICE AND THE RESTORATION OF PANCHAMI LANDS FOR ADIDRAVIDAR COMMUNITIES IN INDIA

Submitted in Respectful Reference to Articles 51(c) and 46 of the Constitution of India

Date: 18th March 2026

Place: Republic of India

SUBMISSION AUTHORITY

Submitted with utmost constitutional respect to:

His Excellency,
The Hon'ble President of the Republic of India,
Rashtrapati Bhavan,
New Delhi – 110004
India.

Your Excellency,

In accordance with Article 51(c) of the Constitution of India, which encourages the fostering of respect for international law and treaty obligations in the relations among nations, and Article 46 of the Constitution of India, which directs the State to promote the educational and economic interests of Scheduled Castes and other weaker sections and protect them from social injustice and exploitation.

This policy submission is respectfully placed for consideration and possible transmission, where appropriate, to:

- The United Nations
- The United Nations General Assembly
- The Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC)
- Relevant United Nations Human Rights and Development Mechanisms
- All Member States of the United Nations
- International Human Rights and Development Institutions

PREAMBULAR CONSIDERATIONS

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, particularly the commitment to human dignity, equality, justice, and the peaceful advancement of all peoples,

Recognizing that throughout history certain communities across the world have endured systemic exclusion, social marginalization, and structural economic deprivation,

Acknowledging that during the late nineteenth century, under the administration of the British Government in the Madras Presidency, extensive studies and administrative inquiries were conducted regarding the severe socio-economic conditions of communities historically classified as “Depressed Classes,”

Noting that, based upon these assessments, specific land allocations were introduced — historically known as Panchami Lands — intended to secure livelihood, economic independence, and social dignity for members of the AdiDravidar communities,

Recognizing that these lands were granted with protective legal provisions designed to prevent their alienation or transfer away from the intended beneficiaries,

Deeply concerned that, over the course of subsequent decades, significant portions of these historically designated lands have reportedly been lost through irregular transfers, administrative oversight, social pressures, or structural inequalities,

Recognizing that the restoration and protection of historically allocated lands represent not only a question of property rights but also a broader issue of historical justice, constitutional responsibility, and human dignity,

OPERATIVE PRINCIPLES

1. Affirms that the historical allocation of Panchami Lands constituted an early administrative recognition of structural injustice and economic marginalization affecting oppressed communities.
2. Emphasizes that the protection and potential restoration of such historically designated lands may be examined within the framework of constitutional justice, democratic governance, and the protection of human dignity.
3. Recognizes that safeguarding land rights for historically disadvantaged communities contributes to inclusive development, economic security, and social stability.

4. Encourages careful documentation, transparent review, and lawful assessment of Panchami Land records to determine the extent of historical alienation and the possibilities for appropriate corrective measures consistent with constitutional processes.
5. Notes that addressing historical land inequities contributes to social justice, economic empowerment, and the strengthening of democratic institutions.
6. Encourages constructive dialogue among national authorities, constitutional institutions, scholars, and civil society organizations in exploring peaceful and lawful mechanisms to address historical grievances associated with Panchami Lands.
7. Affirms that the advancement, dignity, and socio-economic empowerment of historically oppressed communities serve as important indicators of a society's commitment to justice, equality, and democratic values.

CONCLUSION

The alleviation of historical injustice and the restoration of dignity to marginalized communities represent fundamental expressions of humanity, constitutional responsibility, and ethical governance.

A nation's commitment to justice is reflected not merely in its legal frameworks but in its willingness to address the unfinished responsibilities of history.

The welfare and advancement of AdiDravidar communities therefore stand not only as a social objective, but as a moral indicator of the strength and maturity of democratic civilization.

This submission is respectfully presented in good faith, with full respect for the sovereignty of India, the Constitution of India, international law, and the peaceful pursuit of justice and human dignity.

Issued for consideration and global public reflection.

ANNEXURE – I

HISTORICAL LEGAL FOUNDATIONS OF PANCHAMI LAND ALLOCATIONS

(Madras Presidency – Late Nineteenth Century)

1. Historical Administrative Context

During the late nineteenth century, under the administration of the British Government in the Madras Presidency, detailed inquiries were conducted into the severe socio-economic conditions faced by communities historically classified as “Depressed Classes.”

These inquiries identified widespread landlessness, social exclusion, and economic vulnerability affecting these communities.

In response, administrative measures were introduced to provide land access as a means of social and economic upliftment.

2. Board Standing Order No. 15 (Madras Presidency Land Assignment Rules)

The principal administrative framework governing such land assignments emerged through the Madras Presidency Board Standing Orders, particularly Board Standing Order No. 15.

Under these provisions:

- Government wastelands were assigned to members of the Depressed Classes.
- These lands were intended to provide agricultural livelihood and economic security.
- Special protective conditions were attached to such assignments.

3. Non-Alienation Principle

A fundamental legal safeguard of Panchami Land assignments was the non-alienation principle.

Under this principle:

- Lands assigned to Depressed Classes were not to be transferred or sold to non-beneficiary communities.
- The purpose of this restriction was to prevent economic exploitation and ensure that the intended beneficiaries retained long-term access to land.

4. Social Justice Character of Panchami Lands

These land assignments represented one of the earliest administrative recognitions of structural inequality affecting marginalized communities.

The Panchami Land system therefore holds historical significance as an early form of land-based social justice intervention within colonial administrative law.

5. Contemporary Relevance

The historical intent behind Panchami Land assignments — namely economic upliftment and social protection — remains relevant in discussions concerning historical justice, land equity, and the welfare of marginalized communities.

This annexure is provided solely for historical and contextual reference and does not create any new legal obligations.

*****

ANNEXURE – II

SOCIO-ECONOMIC IMPACT OF PANCHAMI LAND DISPOSSESSION

(An Analytical Context for Historical Land Justice)

1. HISTORICAL PURPOSE OF PANCHAMI LAND ASSIGNMENTS

The allocation of Panchami Lands during the late nineteenth century in the Madras Presidency was designed as a corrective administrative measure to address the extreme socio-economic marginalization experienced by communities historically classified as “Depressed Classes.”

The objective of these assignments included:

- Providing land ownership to landless families
- Ensuring agricultural livelihood and food security
- Promoting economic independence

- Reducing social vulnerability and dependency
- Strengthening dignity and social participation

Land access was recognized as a foundational instrument for economic empowerment.

2. STRUCTURAL SIGNIFICANCE OF LAND OWNERSHIP

For historically marginalized communities, land ownership functions not merely as a material asset but as a structural pillar of socio-economic mobility.

Access to land enables:

- Stable livelihood opportunities
- Agricultural self-sufficiency
- Intergenerational economic security
- Social dignity and community stability
- Reduction of exploitative labor dependency

The original Panchami Land policy therefore represented a transformative step toward economic justice.

3. CONSEQUENCES OF LAND ALIENATION

Where historically protected lands have been lost or alienated, affected communities may experience multiple socio-economic consequences, including:

- Loss of livelihood security
- Increased landlessness
- Dependence on precarious wage labor
- Rural economic marginalization
- Intergenerational poverty

Land dispossession may also weaken community resilience and long-term development opportunities.

4. IMPACT ON SOCIAL EQUITY

Land inequality contributes to wider structural disparities in:

- income distribution
- educational opportunities

- social mobility
- community health and well-being

Addressing historical land inequities can therefore contribute to broader goals of inclusive development and social justice.

5. POLICY RELEVANCE FOR MODERN GOVERNANCE

A careful examination of historically designated Panchami Lands may assist policymakers in understanding the relationship between land access and long-term socio-economic stability.

Such examination may support:

- inclusive rural development strategies
- land record transparency
- equitable economic participation
- social justice initiatives

6. CIVILIZATIONAL AND MORAL DIMENSION

The advancement of historically marginalized communities is widely recognized as an indicator of the moral maturity and ethical strength of a society.

Addressing historical inequities in land access may therefore contribute not only to economic progress but also to social harmony and democratic resilience.

This annexure is provided as an analytical and contextual framework to support constructive dialogue and policy reflection.

*****

ANNEXURE – III

CONSTITUTIONAL AND LEGAL CONTEXT

(Relevant Principles within the Constitution of India)

1. ARTICLE 46 – PROMOTION OF EDUCATIONAL AND ECONOMIC INTERESTS

Article 46 of the Constitution of India directs the State to promote with special care the educational and economic interests of the Scheduled Castes and other weaker sections of society and to protect them from social injustice and exploitation.

The historical objective of Panchami Land assignments is consistent with the constitutional vision embodied in Article 46, which emphasizes economic empowerment and social protection.

2. ARTICLE 14 – EQUALITY BEFORE LAW

Article 14 guarantees equality before the law and equal protection of the laws within the territory of India.

Efforts to examine historical land inequities may contribute to strengthening equal protection principles by ensuring that historically disadvantaged communities receive fair and lawful consideration.

3. ARTICLE 21 – RIGHT TO LIFE AND DIGNITY

The Supreme Court of India has interpreted Article 21 broadly to include the right to live with dignity and the right to livelihood.

Secure access to land and livelihood resources may therefore be viewed as consistent with the broader constitutional understanding of human dignity.

4. ARTICLE 38 – SOCIAL ORDER FOR THE PROMOTION OF WELFARE

Article 38 directs the State to promote the welfare of the people by securing a social order in which justice — social, economic, and political — informs all institutions of national life.

Addressing historical inequalities in land access may align with the constitutional objective of reducing disparities and promoting social justice.

5. ARTICLE 51(c) – RESPECT FOR INTERNATIONAL LAW

Article 51(c) encourages the State to foster respect for international law and treaty obligations in the dealings of organized peoples with one another.

International human rights principles, including equality, dignity, and protection from discrimination, complement constitutional commitments to justice and social inclusion.

6. DEMOCRATIC AND PEACEFUL APPROACH

Any examination of Panchami Land issues must remain fully consistent with:

- the sovereignty of India
- the Constitution of India
- lawful democratic processes
- peaceful institutional dialogue

The objective of this annexure is to highlight constitutional principles relevant to discussions of historical justice and inclusive development.

ANNEXURE – IV

HISTORICAL EXTENT AND ESTIMATED AREA OF PANCHAMI LANDS IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY AND PRESENT-DAY TAMIL NADU

(A Historical and Policy Reference Framework)

1. HISTORICAL LAND ASSIGNMENT CONTEXT

During the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, the administration of the Madras Presidency introduced land assignment measures intended to address the severe landlessness experienced by communities then categorized as “Depressed Classes.”

These assignments, commonly referred to as Panchami Lands, were granted primarily from Government wastelands and uncultivated lands.

The objective was to provide agricultural livelihood, economic security, and social dignity to historically marginalized communities, particularly those now recognized as Adi Dravidar communities.

2. ADMINISTRATIVE RECORDS AND ESTIMATED EXTENT

Historical administrative records and later scholarly analyses indicate that substantial areas of land were assigned under the Panchami Land framework across several districts of the Madras Presidency.

In present-day Tamil Nadu, policy discussions and historical studies have frequently referenced an estimated figure approaching:

Approximately 1.2 million acres
(around 485,000 hectares)

of land historically designated as Panchami Lands.

These estimates arise from compilations of district-level land records, colonial administrative reports, and later academic research.

3. VARIATIONS IN HISTORICAL RECORDS

It is important to note that the precise historical extent of Panchami Lands remains subject to variation due to:

- incomplete archival records
- changes in district boundaries
- inconsistencies in historical land classification
- subsequent administrative modifications
- partial loss of land registers over time

Consequently, modern verification requires careful review of archival land registers, revenue records, and district-level documentation.

4. GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION

Historically, Panchami Lands were distributed across multiple districts of the former Madras Presidency, including regions that correspond to present-day districts of Tamil Nadu.

These assignments were typically made in rural areas where agricultural livelihood opportunities could be developed.

5. POLICY RELEVANCE IN CONTEMPORARY DISCUSSION

The historical extent of Panchami Lands remains an important reference point in discussions related to:

- land rights and historical justice
- rural development
- social equity
- economic empowerment of historically marginalized communities

A systematic and transparent documentation of such lands may assist policymakers, researchers, and institutions in better understanding historical land allocation patterns.

6. NEED FOR ARCHIVAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW

For accurate contemporary assessment, the following sources may be examined:

- Colonial revenue records of the Madras Presidency
- District land assignment registers
- Survey and settlement records
- Government archival repositories
- State revenue department records

Such review may assist in establishing reliable historical documentation.

7. POLICY AND ACADEMIC SIGNIFICANCE

The historical study of Panchami Lands contributes to broader academic and policy discussions concerning:

- land reform history in South India
- colonial administrative law and social policy
- economic empowerment strategies for marginalized communities
- the relationship between land access and social justice

8. CONCLUDING OBSERVATION

The historical allocation of Panchami Lands represents a significant administrative effort to address structural inequality in land ownership.

Understanding the extent and evolution of these land assignments may contribute to informed dialogue on historical justice, inclusive development, and equitable economic opportunity.

This annexure is provided solely for historical, academic, and policy reference purposes and does not create new legal obligations.

ANNEXURE – V

INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS CONTEXT

(Relating Historical Land Justice to Global Human Rights Principles)

1. UNITED NATIONS CHARTER

The Charter of the United Nations establishes the foundational commitment of the international community to human dignity, equality, and the promotion of social progress.

Article 1(3) emphasizes international cooperation in solving problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

Historical land inequities affecting marginalized communities may therefore be examined within the broader framework of human dignity, equality, and peaceful development.

2. UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS (1948)

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights recognizes the inherent dignity and equal rights of all members of the human family.

Relevant provisions include:

Article 1

“All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights.”

Article 17

“Everyone has the right to own property alone as well as in association with others.”

Article 25

Recognizes the right to an adequate standard of living, including access to resources necessary for livelihood.

Secure access to land has historically been recognized as an important foundation for livelihood and dignity in rural societies.

3. INTERNATIONAL COVENANT ON ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND CULTURAL RIGHTS (ICESCR)

The ICESCR affirms the rights of individuals and communities to pursue economic, social, and cultural development.

Article 11 recognizes the right of everyone to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food and livelihood.

Access to productive resources, including land, may therefore contribute to the realization of these rights.

4. INTERNATIONAL COVENANT ON CIVIL AND POLITICAL RIGHTS (ICCPR)

The ICCPR affirms the principle of equality before the law and protection from discrimination.

Article 26 provides that all persons are equal before the law and entitled without discrimination to equal protection of the law.

Addressing historical inequalities in land access may therefore contribute to strengthening equality and social justice within democratic societies.

5. UNITED NATIONS SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS (SDGs)

The global development framework adopted by the United Nations includes commitments to reducing inequality and promoting inclusive development.

Relevant goals include:

SDG 1 – No Poverty

SDG 10 – Reduced Inequalities

SDG 16 – Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions

Improving access to economic resources for historically marginalized communities contributes to these global objectives.

6. INTERNATIONAL PERSPECTIVE ON HISTORICAL JUSTICE

Across many regions of the world, governments and institutions have examined historical inequities in land ownership as part of broader social justice and development policies.

Such discussions are typically conducted through peaceful democratic processes, constitutional frameworks, and evidence-based policy analysis.

7. PRINCIPLE OF PEACEFUL AND CONSTRUCTIVE DIALOGUE

The international human rights system encourages constructive dialogue, institutional engagement, and peaceful mechanisms for addressing historical grievances.

Any consideration of historical land issues should therefore remain consistent with:

- the sovereignty of the State concerned
- the rule of law
- constitutional governance
- democratic institutions

8. CONCLUDING OBSERVATION

The pursuit of social dignity, economic inclusion, and historical justice for marginalized communities is widely recognized as consistent with the broader aspirations of the international human rights system.

Efforts to understand and address historical land inequities may therefore contribute to peaceful development, social stability, and inclusive democratic progress.

This annexure is presented solely for contextual reference within the framework of international human rights principles and does not create new legal obligations.

ANNEXURE – VI

CIVILIZATIONAL MORAL PERSPECTIVE ON ARAM, JUSTICE, AND THE MEASURE OF SOCIETY

1. INTRODUCTION

Throughout human history, civilizations have developed legal systems, institutions, and governance frameworks in order to organize societies and maintain stability.

However, beyond formal law and institutional structures, every civilization is ultimately sustained by a deeper moral foundation — a shared understanding of justice, dignity, and responsibility toward fellow human beings.

Within the philosophical traditions of the Indian subcontinent, this moral order has long been expressed through the concept of "Aram" — a principle signifying righteousness, moral balance, compassion, and ethical responsibility toward all beings.

2. ARAM AS A CIVILIZATIONAL PRINCIPLE

Aram represents more than an individual moral duty; it embodies the collective ethical responsibility of society.

Under the principle of Aram:

- Justice must extend to those historically denied dignity.
- Social structures must not perpetuate exclusion.
- Governance must strive toward fairness and compassion.
- Economic opportunity must be accessible to all communities.

A civilization guided by Aram measures its progress not solely through wealth, technology, or power, but through the degree to which justice reaches the most marginalized members of society.

3. THE MORAL TEST OF A SOCIETY

The strength of a civilization is revealed in the manner in which it responds to historical injustice.

Societies that acknowledge past inequities and seek peaceful, lawful remedies demonstrate moral maturity and democratic resilience.

Conversely, unresolved structural injustices may continue to produce social divisions, economic disparity, and loss of human dignity.

The advancement of historically marginalized communities therefore serves as a meaningful indicator of ethical progress within a society.

4. LAND, DIGNITY, AND HUMAN SECURITY

Land has historically represented not only a productive economic resource but also a foundation for human dignity, livelihood, and social stability.

For communities that have historically faced landlessness and exclusion, access to land may symbolize:

- economic independence
- social participation
- community stability
- intergenerational opportunity

Ensuring equitable access to such foundational resources may therefore contribute to the restoration of dignity and the strengthening of social harmony.

5. CIVILIZATIONAL RESPONSIBILITY

Every generation inherits not only the achievements of the past but also its unfinished responsibilities.

Where historical structures have produced disadvantage or marginalization, societies are often called upon to examine such conditions through lawful, democratic, and peaceful means.

Such reflection does not diminish a nation's strength; rather, it demonstrates the ethical confidence of a mature democracy.

6. ARAM AND PEACEFUL SOCIAL PROGRESS

Aram encourages solutions that are:

- peaceful
- lawful
- compassionate
- inclusive
- future-oriented

It rejects violence, coercion, and division, while encouraging dialogue, institutional engagement, and policy reform guided by moral conscience.

7. MESSAGE TO FUTURE GENERATIONS

Future generations may judge our civilization not solely by the technologies we developed or the wealth we accumulated, but by the fairness with which we treated those who were historically marginalized.

A society that expands dignity strengthens its future.

A society that ignores injustice risks weakening the foundations of peace.

8. CONCLUDING REFLECTION

Justice guided by Aram is not an act of charity.

It is an affirmation of shared humanity.

When dignity is restored to the most marginalized members of society, the entire civilization moves closer to peace, stability, and moral balance.

*****

FINAL SECTION

GLOBAL CIVILIZATIONAL CALL FOR HISTORICAL LAND JUSTICE

(A Call for Reflection, Responsibility, and Peaceful Progress)

1. A MOMENT FOR MORAL REFLECTION

Throughout the history of human civilization, societies have progressed through science, governance, and economic development. Yet the true measure of civilization has never been power or prosperity alone.

It has always been the willingness of societies to confront injustice, to recognize the dignity of all people, and to extend fairness to those who have historically been marginalized.

Historical land inequities represent one of the enduring questions of justice in many parts of the world. Addressing such questions requires patience, wisdom, and peaceful institutional dialogue.

2. JUSTICE AS A FOUNDATION OF STABILITY

Peaceful societies are sustained not only through law but through legitimacy — the confidence of citizens that their institutions strive toward fairness and dignity for all.

When historical injustices are acknowledged and examined through constitutional and democratic processes, societies strengthen social cohesion and democratic resilience.

Justice pursued through lawful means contributes to stability, trust, and long-term national harmony.

3. THE ROLE OF DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTIONS

Modern democratic institutions possess the capacity to address complex historical questions through research, dialogue, legal review, and policy reform.

Constructive engagement among constitutional authorities, scholars, civil society, and affected communities may support a deeper understanding of historical land issues and potential pathways toward inclusive development.

Such engagement must always respect:

- the sovereignty of the nation
- the rule of law
- democratic processes
- peaceful civic discourse

4. A GLOBAL PERSPECTIVE

Across the world, societies continue to reflect upon historical inequities in land ownership, social opportunity, and economic participation.

These reflections are part of the broader global effort to promote dignity, equality, and inclusive development.

The international community encourages constructive dialogue, institutional engagement, and evidence-based policy reflection when addressing historical grievances.

5. ARAM AND THE ETHICS OF CIVILIZATION

Within the moral traditions of humanity, the concept of Aram reminds us that justice is not merely a legal question but a civilizational responsibility.

Aram teaches that:

- dignity must reach every human being
- compassion must guide governance

- fairness must extend beyond privilege
- peace grows where justice is honored

A society that expands dignity strengthens its moral foundation.

6. MESSAGE TO FUTURE GENERATIONS

Future generations may look back upon our era and ask:

Did we possess the courage to examine the unfinished responsibilities of history?

Did we seek justice peacefully and thoughtfully?

Did we strive to ensure that no community remained permanently excluded from dignity and opportunity?

The answers to these questions will shape the legacy of our civilization.

7. CONCLUDING DECLARATION

This document is presented as a respectful contribution to public reflection, policy dialogue, and democratic engagement concerning historical land justice.

It is issued:

- in full respect of the sovereignty of India
- in alignment with the Constitution of India
- consistent with international law and human dignity
- committed to peaceful, lawful, and democratic processes

Justice guided by conscience strengthens peace.

Dignity extended to the marginalized strengthens democracy.

And when societies choose fairness over indifference, civilization itself advances.

Guiding Principle:

“அறம் தான் உன்னையும் என்னையும் இணைத்தது”

(Aram is what united you and me)
